

Modern slavery & the accounting profession

& The establishment of the UK's first university-led tax clinic

15th November 2019, 12:00 -13:00
CY007 @UCLan Cyprus

Abstract

In this dual research seminar, Debbie Wood, a Lecturer in the Accounting and Finance Division in Lancashire School of Business and Enterprise, will present and discuss two research projects she is involved with on the Preston Campus, UK. The first project is entitled 'Modern slavery and the accounting profession' and the second, 'The establishment of the UK's first university-led tax clinic.' Both research studies are at an early stage, and this will be an opportunity to get an overview of these exciting projects, and identify any areas of potential collaboration between Preston and Cyprus Campuses. Moreover, through this seminar, Debbie will share with us her extensive experience in Finance and Accounting.

Speaker

Debbie Wood

Biography

Debbie is a Chartered Accountant who spent twelve years working as a Senior Auditor and Finance Manager across the UK public sector. Debbie graduated from the University of Manchester in 2004 with a joint honours degree in law and accounting before qualifying as a CIPFA accountant. She is currently studying on an LLM with the Open University, where she also lectures in financial and management accounting. At UCLan, Debbie lectures in business law and company law for accountants.